The New Auditor.—Last 'Monday morning the Grand Army boys hitched up their teams, drove to the residence of their late commander, E. W. Poe, and after loading his household goods into their wagons, moved them to Bowling Green, where for the next three years, he will shoulder the Auditorial duties. In the removal of Ebb. Poe, North Baltimore has lost one of her most enterprising citizens. No one man has done more to make our town what it is to-day than he has; and no man in the town has more friends and fewer enemies. Bowling Green will lose nothing by the acquisition of Mr. Poe and his amiable wife and family.—North Baltimore Sun.

Says an exchange: "Cleve'and society is greatly agitated over the bibulous tendencies of some of its members. It has leaked out that several cosy little bars where a social glass of liquor may be obtained by ladies 'on the quiet,' are running to large patronage. These saloons are not placed in public sight, and properly called such, but under the guise of bakeries and dressmaking stores have a convenient little back room, where the bibulous female can partake of her 'bitters' unperceived. This private business of tippling has been 'given away by a married lady of that ciry, who is heartily ashamed of this degrading habit of her sex. She describes one of these that ther sex.
